Bryce Starlight

Vice President, Development
Taza Development Corp.

Bryce Starlight is a highly accomplished individual who has devoted his career to improving Indigenous communities and promoting cultural awareness. He currently holds the position of Vice President, Development at Taza Development Corp. With a diverse background working with Indigenous communities, Bryce has acquired extensive experience in political and technical working groups related to First Nations land management, water policy, and resource management. Prior to his current role, he spent over five years in the private sector, collaborating closely with Indigenous nations to develop pipeline and transmission line applications in Alberta and British Columbia.

Bryce has demonstrated his commitment to empowering Indigenous communities and fostering collaboration between industry and Indigenous communities throughout his career. He has played a crucial role in managing engagement on industry projects, facilitating working committees, and presenting to First Nation leadership. As Vice President of Development, Bryce plays a crucial role in ensuring that there is an incorporation of traditional knowledge, values, and practices, which will not only preserve Tsuut'ina culture but also promote its understanding among stakeholders.
